

2-Week Truce In Soft Coal Strike Eases Angry Nation

By HAROLD W. WARD
Washington, May 11 (AP)—A two-week truce in the soft coal strike eased the crippling pressure on the nation's economy today, and raised hopes that settlement of the lengthy labor dispute is in the offing.

President Truman put both the United Mine Workers and pit owners on notice that he wanted them to work out an agreement in the next four or five days on a new contract.

With this injunction, UMW's chief John L. Lewis and the bituminous coal operators buckled down to the first of a new series of negotiation conferences.

Government agencies responsible for conserving dwindling fuel supplies meanwhile restudied their numerous strike emergency measures in the light of the truce development, but indications were that most, if not all of them, would be continued until the long range coal outlook became more definite.

"Stumbling Block"

The truce in the 40-day walkout materialized quite unexpectedly on Lewis' initiative yesterday. Its effect is to send the miners back to work Monday until May 25. In that time it is estimated that they can produce 25,000,000 tons of coal, gauging by the pre-strike weekly output of approximately 13,000,000 tons.

The operators agreed to the truce proposal somewhat dubiously, emphasizing that differences were far from settled in regard to Lewis' demand for a royalty-raised health and welfare fund for his miners. This is the demand that has proved the big stumbling block in contract negotiations to date.

First indication that the government did not intend to relax major emergency regulations came from the Solid Fuels Administration which said distribution of the coal mined in the next two weeks will remain under its control.

The Office of Defense Transportation, which has embargoed all railroad freight shipments but food, fuel and other essentials, said a decision on future rail movements will be made today.

Solons Unmoved

John D. Small, Civilian Production Administrator, expressed the opinion that the government could not afford to revoke orders for brownouts and illuminating gas rationing until "this picture is a lot clearer."

On Capitol Hill, the truce agreement failed to bring any slackening in heavy Senate pressure for speedy action on new legislation to cope with major labor disputes. The chamber, by a 66-9 vote yesterday, made the subject its first item of business when it reconvenes Monday.

Senator Byrd (D-Va.) predicted to reporters that the first test vote (Please Turn to Page 2)

CHECK ON PAY CLAIMS BY VETS

Under orders received from headquarters, E. A. Crouse, local manager of the U. S. Employment Service office, stated today that a program of checking on claims filed by veterans since their return from the service has been begun to see that no persons filed claims for weeks in which they were employed.

Section F, Title 5, of Public Law 346, popularly known as the G. I. Bill of Rights, grants every honorably discharged veteran with 90 days of service or more the right to file a claim for Servicemen's Readjustment Allowance and to receive payments providing he is either unemployed or partially employed and is able and available for work. However, such earnings received during any week in which benefits are filed, must be reported at the time the claim is filed. In cases where earnings are less than $20 per week, upon presentation of these facts, supplemental benefits can be paid so that the veterans' income for both employment and benefits are equal to $20 per week, Mr. Crouse said. In cases where earnings equal or exceed $20 per week, the claimant is ineligible for benefits for that week. Self-employed veterans can receive benefits if their net earnings are less than $100 per month, upon presentation of a financial statement of their income and expenditures during the month. Payments made on these claims cover the difference between the net income and $100 per month, payable in monthly installments. Persons who conceal earnings or other misrepresentation are liable to serious penalties by law, including the repayment of all amounts received illegally.

Mr. Crouse suggested that all veterans who may be in doubt of their eligibility for any week of benefits due to receiving wages should contact the claims clerk at the USES office before signing a claim. In this manner, it would be possible to make any adjustments on payment of benefits as required by Public Law 346, without jeopardizing the eligibility of a veteran for future benefits, in case of his employment at a later date, he explained.

YOUTH KILLED IN CRASH NEAR FLOHR'S CHURCH

A pleasure ride in a company station wagon after deliveries had been completed ended in the fatal injury this morning of John Kenneth Little, 17, Thurmont R. 2, five miles west of Gettysburg on the Lincoln highway near Flohr's church.

Little, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Little, Thurmont R. 2, and a friend, Michael Lingg, 22, Thurmont R. 2, recently discharged from the Navy, were riding in a truck owned by the Gall and Smith turkey farm, Thurmont. Little, who was driving, apparently fell asleep and crashed into a tree in front of the Mickle home between Cashtown and McKnightstown, state police, who investigated said.

Skull Is Fractured
According to police, Little, who was employed by Gall and Smith, was to deliver some produce in Emmitsburg Friday evening. Lingg went along for the ride. After they had made their deliveries they decided to take a drive before returning to Thurmont, police said.

The two had driven to Chambersburg and were coming from there to Gettysburg, before returning to Thurmont, when the accident happened. After the crash, police said, Little was removed to the Warner hospital by ambulance, dying shortly after his arrival at the hospital.

Dr. C. G. Crist, county coroner, said that death was caused by a fractured skull. Little also suffered lacerations of the scalp, and contusions of the face.

Altogether $14,480.10 has been expended during the period on home service activities of the county chapter. During the period, from January 1, 1943, to May 1, 1946, the home service cases totalled 6,739, of which 4,844 involved county men in active service, 1,274 involved men who are veterans and 621 were purely civilian.

In connection with the cases the Red Cross conducted 4,498 office interviews, 1,050 home visits and made 289 reference visits.

Top outlay was for the grants and loans made to cover basic needs before the first allowance or pension payments were received or when those payments were interrupted. For food or fuel given in special emergency needs, the Red Cross spent $390.64. For meals for transients, both ex-service and civilian, the Red Cross spent $23.80. For clothing and bedding, disaster relief, $64.34 was expended. Medical and surgical supplies given out totalled $191.17 and $29 went toward lodging for transients.

Many Telegrams, Calls
To workers who visited homes investigating the needs for emergency furloughs and leaves, or extensions of them, or to make home conditions reports to field directors $439.38 was given for their mileage. The Red Cross spent $40.13 to obtain birth, death and marriage certificates needed by soldiers, sailors and veterans. For telegrams to verify need for emergency furloughs and leaves, extensions, home condition and other reports, the Red Cross spent $1,963.85 and for telephone calls made for the same purposes such as securing verifications, doctors' reports and delivering messages to families by long distance calls, $855.18 was expended.

CHAMBER ASKS LAWS TO CURB STRIKE POWER

"Legislation should be enacted," the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce has informed Congressman Chester Gross, "making it unlawful for a strike to interrupt or prevent the use of public utilities," and laws should be passed, the chamber has told the congressman, "to prevent any labor leader or union to impose a tax or royalty on any commodity used by the public." The letter refers specifically to the soft coal strike.

In addition, the chamber contends that the existing law should be amended to place the "same duty on labor unions to meet and bargain collectively with employers as is now imposed by law on employers to meet and bargain collectively with labor unions." A letter embodying these three suggestions, over the signature of Henry W. Garvin, president of the chamber, was being sent to Congressman Gross this week.

Suggest Three Things
"At the request of the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce, I am addressing this letter to you to give an expression of opinion concerning the situation which confronts not only Gettysburg but our entire nation—that is, the crippling effect upon our country of the strike now existing in the soft coal mining industry," the letter to Congressman Gross says.

"It is the consensus of our membership that if three things were done now, this situation may be cleared up, and future similar situations avoided," the letter continues. "These points are:

"Legislation should be enacted making it unlawful for a strike to interrupt or prevent the use of public utilities, or of any other industry which in turn has the same disastrous effect on the public.

"Legislation should be enacted, making it unlawful for any labor leader, labor union, or any other group or individual to impose a tax, or royalty in the nature thereof, on any commodity used by the public. We have always believed that only our government has and should have the power to tax, and therefore, no labor leader, labor union or any other group or individual should have this power.

Equal Responsibility
"Our existing law should be amended so as to place the same duty on labor unions to meet and bargain collectively with employers, as is now imposed by law upon employers to meet and bargain collectively with labor unions.

"We urge you to use your best efforts in accomplishing the above proposals, or any proposals similar thereto, which will effect the same result."

In conjunction with the celebration of Religious Book Week, more than 150 members of the Washington-Maryland-Virginia unit of the Catholic Library Association assembled at Mount Saint Mary's College, Emmitsburg, today for the spring meeting of the association.

The Rev. Fr. Hugh Phillips, college librarian and president of the district association, is presiding as chairman of the meeting. The representatives included Catholic librarians from all the elementary and secondary schools, college and public libraries in the district. In attendance also are the principals of many of the district schools.

The program began with a conducted tour of the Gettysburg Battlefield and a lecture on "Civil War Battles" by Joseph L. Rosensteel at the National Museum here this morning.

Luncheon At Noon

This noon the group will meet at a luncheon at Mt. St. Mary's at which the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John L. Sheridan, president of the college, will welcome the representatives to the Mount.

Following the luncheon, the regular business meeting of the district association is to be held in the college gymnasium. A nominating committee is to be selected to propose candidates for the regular election of officers at the fall meeting.

At the conclusion of the business meeting the members will assemble at St. Joseph's College, Emmitsburg, where the Rev. Anslem Strittmatter, O.S.B. will give an illustrated lecture on the history, destruction and the plans for the rebuilding of the famous Abbey of Monte Cassino. A tour of the college grounds and a pilgrimage to the tomb of Mother Seton is also scheduled.

Here And There News Collected At Random

Credit for the election of the late Eddie Plank, Gettysburg's great hurler, to baseball's Hall of Fame, at Cooperstown, N. Y., can be given, in the main, to one man. He is C. William Duncan, of Philadelphia, editor of the Service Man's department for The Inquirer.

"Bill" waged a one-man campaign to have Plank recognized as one of baseball's immortals. For a number of years Plank failed to receive the necessary number of votes from sports writers. Duncan continued his campaign relentlessly. This year Plank headed the list of those baseball greats to be honored.

From a local sports fan, who asked that his name be withheld, comes this interesting sidelight on Plank:

"The recently announced selection of Eddie Plank for a place among the immortals of baseball at Cooperstown calls to mind that this great athlete was a man of many and varied interests, not all of which were connected with the sporting world. Ed had a keen business mind, and was successful in several local enterprises after he quit the diamond.

ADVANCE PLANS FOR PARADE HERE MEMORIAL DAY

Plans for the annual Memorial Day parade here were advanced Friday evening at a meeting of the Memorial Day committee with the appointment of LeRoy H. Winebrenner as marshal and arrangement of the order of march.

Aides selected for the parade were David A. Tawney of the Sons of Union Veterans and George R. Markle, representing the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the United Spanish War Veterans. Another aide will be appointed from among World War II members, the committee decided.

Former Gettysburg Burgess Fred G. Pfeffer was selected to deliver Lincoln's Gettysburg address and W. L. Baldwin, for the seventeenth time was named to sound taps.

Parade At 2:30 P. M.

Henry T. Biddle was appointed to take care of roping off the area about the rostrum at the cemetery. William Eckenrode and Harry Koch were placed in charge of decorating the rostrum for the occasion.

The committee decided to write to former Ohio Governor John W. Bricker, speaker for the services, inviting him and Mrs. Bricker to attend a dinner and visit the Gettysburg Battlefield while here.

The parade will start at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of May 30, according to present plans with Attorney William L. Meals, secretary of the committee, and Marshal Winebrenner instructed to change that time if arrangements for a broadcast for the exercises, now being sought, prove successful.

Jesse E. Snyder was appointed chairman of the committee to collect funds to defray the expenses of the exercises.

STATE WELFARE OFFICIAL TALKS TO COUNTY UNIT

"I don't know of anything that can be of greater service than giving a child a decent home," Dr. E. Preston Sharpe, director of the bureau of community work, Department of Welfare, Harrisburg, declared, at the dinner meeting of the Adams County Child Welfare committee in the Methodist church Friday night. "I hope the time comes when the citizens of this county look upon the job of taking foster children as a patriotic duty," he added.

Forty members of the committee, friends and guests, including foster parents of children under the care of the committee were present for the dinner and Doctor Sharpe's address. Dr. Dwight F. Putman, pastor of Christ Lutheran church and chairman of the welfare committee, presided.

"Unfortunately, we in America have not paid too much attention to our children," Dr. Sharpe said. "We have been doing a beautiful job in teaching the exact sciences, but we have made a poor job of teaching people how to live together. If we knew more about this there wouldn't be so many impediments in our reconversion program."

Economic Point of View

Because of the war and war marriages, Dr. Sharpe said that the nation will have, in the next few years, more children requiring care than ever in the history of the country, and he predicted a larger load in Adams county.

"It costs between $1.25 and $1.30 a day to keep a man prisoner in the Eastern Penitentiary," Dr. Sharpe said. "Yet people say, when a man is sentenced to five years, 'why didn't the judge give him ten years.' It is foolish economy to say 'give him ten years' and let some youngster in your community go along without service. If each welfare worker keeps only two children out of a training school he or she has paid for his salary."

Special Meeting Of Council On Monday

A special meeting of the Gettysburg borough council will be held at 8 o'clock (DST) Monday evening, Mrs. Anna B. Dracha, borough secretary, announced today.

Welcome Home Celebration For Adams County Veterans Of World War II On V-J Day

Adams county will mark the first anniversary of the end of World War II with a Welcome Home celebration for its veterans of that war.

V-J Day—Wednesday, August 14—was selected for the tribute to Adams county's veterans of World War II at the first general meeting of the county-wide committee in charge of arrangements Friday evening at the court house.

Judge W. C. Sheely is chairman of the committee. During the war he was chairman of the county's civilian defense council.

Set Up Tentative Program

Initiated by veterans' organizations in the county who asked Judge Sheely to head up the planning committee, the observance is being arranged to honor the county's veterans, living and dead, and to give a public and official "welcome home" to the approximately 4,000 men and women who have returned from duty in the armed forces.

A broad, tentative program was set up at Friday's meeting.

All of the churches of the county will be asked to open the morning of V-J Day for thanksgiving and memorial services, continuing the religious note sounded in places of worship throughout the county on the day hostilities ended last August.

Parade And Memorial Service

Early in the afternoon there will be a huge V-J Day parade in Gettysburg to be followed by brief but appropriate exercises at which there will be an address by an outstanding speaker and a memorial service for the more than 100 countians who gave their lives in the service of their country.

Following the exercises there will be entertainment, a supper, evening entertainment that will include a dance and will be climaxed by an aerial display of fireworks.

Veterans will be the guests of honor throughout the day—and may appear in uniform or civilian clothes, as they wish.

List Committee Heads

Details of the program for the day are in the hands of subcommittees with the next meeting of the general committee set for 8 o'clock Thursday evening, June 6.

The sub-committee chairman, who will form their own committees to help with preparations of the various phases of the celebration, are:

Finance—Edmund W. Thomas, Gettysburg.
Churches—The Rev. Nevin R. Frantz, Arendtsville, president of the county Ministerium.
Parade—LeRoy H. Winebrenner, Gettysburg.

PROGRAM FOR BAND CONCERT IS ANNOUNCED

Sunday evening at 8:30 o'clock the newly-reorganized Blue and Gray band of Gettysburg will present its first public concert in the Majestic theater.

"We wish to give the people of Gettysburg an evening of fine musical entertainment and the band is glad for the opportunity to express musically its appreciation to the many friends in this community whose generous donations have made the reorganization of this band possible."

The band, described as the "largest and most versatile in the history of Gettysburg," will play under the direction of Harry C. Stenger, of Hanover, its leader for many years.

Two Guest Artists

Two guest artists will appear with the band in Sunday evening's concert. They will be Miss Florence Clark, who plays the marimba, and W. W. Clark, a pianist. Both are from New Oxford.

RED PROGRAM IS "UNKNOWN" ISSUE ABROAD

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Whether Winston Churchill's idea of a "United States of Europe, both of the East and of the West" materializes as a goodwill measure of peaceful collaboration, the indications are that the Old World will in any event be divided into two blocs—friendly or otherwise.

As I pointed out recently, one bloc already has been formed in main, and that is the new Russian zone of influence which blankets most of the countries of Eastern Europe and the Balkans. The logical corollary to that will be a Western bloc of nations which will combine because of their special community of interests, including a democratic form of government that is at variance with the Soviet totalitarianism.

Approx of this thought, Mr. Churchill said in his speech at The Hague:

Urges Close Amity
"We hope that the Western democracies of Europe will draw together in ever closer amity and ever closer association. This is a matter which should be pressed from many angles with the utmost perseverance."

Naturally the fact that there were two groups of nations wouldn't ipso facto mean that they must be at logger-heads. Mr. Churchill's "United States of Europe, both of the East and of the West," under the guidance of a world organization, would be calculated "to unify this continent in a manner never known since the fall of the Roman empire."

That would be the ideal. The cold reality is that nobody can say now what the relations among the Old World nations will be in the Europe of tomorrow. We cannot determine that until the realignment of the zones of influence has been finished—or at least until it is clear how great a change is contemplated.

Unknown Quantity

The great unknown quantity at the moment is Russia's program. Moscow long ago made it quite clear that the Soviet Union was determined on extending its sphere of influence to the line from Stettin in Northern Germany southward along the Eastern borders of Poland, Czechoslovakia and Austria to the Adriatic. The Russians also have emphasized their intention of having access to the Mediterranean. Broadly speaking, after we have noted these facts we get a dim-out.

The question agitating United Nations diplomats is how far Russia intends to try to expand. Lack of information on that vital point is one of the chief causes of all the troubles which have been bedeviling the security council of the United Nations and the unhappy conference of big four foreign ministers in Paris.

That surely is a gloomy background for a United States of Europe which will unify the continent. Already it has produced sharp divergence of views between Russian and the Anglo-American fraternity. Whether that divergence will expand into the formation of a defensive bloc of Western European nations will depend on developments in the immediate future. Unless Russia shows its hand and relieves the suspicions and fears of the other Allies, a Western bloc is most likely. And the existence of two blocs formed under such circumstances scarcely could inspire amity.

TO GRADUATE AT WEST POINT

George E. Sheffer, Jr., son of the Rev. and Mrs. George E. Sheffer, New Oxford, is among the cadets to be graduated next month from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. Upon graduation he will be commissioned in the Ordnance Department.

Cadet Sheffer is a graduate of the New Oxford high school, class of 1942, and attended Gettysburg college for one year before going to West Point. He was appointed to the Military Academy by Representative Harry L. Haines of the Twenty-first Congressional District of Pennsylvania.

During his first class year at West Point, the New Oxford youth held the rank of Cadet First Sergeant. He was a member of the soccer squad his three years at the Academy, and was also a member of the 100th Nite Show.

The graduation exercises will be held June 4 at the Academy. There are 877 men in the graduating class, 677 in the ground crew and 210 in the air crew. This is the largest class in the history of the Military Academy.

The Rev. Mr. Sheffer, who is pastor of the First Lutheran church, New Oxford, with Mrs. Sheffer and their daughters Elizabeth Ann and Marilyn, will attend the graduation exercises.

brother of J. William Gilbert, who conducts a cleaning establishment on Chambersburg street.

He served in World War I, and upon his discharge from the army in January, 1919, he became athletic coach at Mount Union high school. In September, 1920, he entered F. and M. to complete the work for a B. S. degree in science with a major in chemistry. While in college he played varsity football and was captain of the team in his senior year.

Served Overseas

Dr. Gilbert returned to his alma mater in 1922 as dean of men and an instructor in the science department until January, 1927, when he accepted a position on the faculty of Girard college. In September, 1927, he was appointed principal of Lansdowne high school, a position he left in September, 1930 to accept the principalship of the Altoona high school.

He served in this position until 1938, when he was appointed superintendent of schools in Altoona. 2-Week Truce would come on his proposal to outlaw the payment by employers of royalties to any union. Lewis has asked for creation of a health and welfare fund, and the operators have said the UMW demands a royalty of up to 10 cents a ton to build up this fund.

Byrd's was only one of the pending proposals.

Wants Strong Law

Senator McMahon (D-Conn.), asked for a congressional study of mine safety and health conditions. Senator Morse (R-Ore.), suggested a "nation-wide hearing on the whole problem of labor relations."

Senator Wiley (R-Wis.), said he isn't going to be "lulled into sleep" by the 12-day mine strike truce. He wanted legislation passed with "guts" in it.

Lewis' surprise truce offer came dramatically yesterday after the White House had called the UMW president and Charles O'Neill, chief spokesman for the operators, in for a talk. When the hour for the conference arrived, Lewis already had advanced his truce proposal.

The operators accepted the deal, but after receiving government assurance, they said, that the retroactive pay increases demanded by Lewis for the two-week period would be offset by price relief. They promised to attempt to work out a permanent contract in the next four or five days as the president requested.

"Whether Mr. Lewis' proposal is a sincere effort to solve this tremendously important problem or is a move to appease public opinion and delay impending legislation the next five days will tell," they said in a formal statement.

Here And There

ball games. No man, in or out of baseball, was more calm and level headed; certainly on the playing field when the chips were down Ed never gave the slightest indication of any eccentricity, but on the other hand was always the steady hand that calmed more excitable, and presumably conservative right-handed team mates.

"Ed's favorite hobby, and here again he excelled as in baseball, was the sport of trapshooting, and it was largely due to his interest and prestige in this sport that Gettysburg came to be recognized as one of the outstanding centers of this fine sport. Most of the nation's greats and near-greats at one time or another shot over the local traps, on the field out near the high school, and some of the matches staged here, with resulting scores, have taken permanent place in the history of target shooting.

"Twenty years ago, in June of 1926, to be exact, the local club was host to the Pennsylvania state organization of sportsmen, and more than five hundred of the leading shotgun experts of the state gathered here for five days shooting, to determine the state championship. This group, along with fans from all sections taxed accommodations of the town for an entire week, and the contest itself developed some of the most spirited competition, and the best scores, of any similar event held before or since.

"After several exciting shoot-offs, the state championship finally went to Steve Crothers, of Philadelphia, who went on from here to become national champion, and one of the greatest target-busters of all time. Bob Bell, of Hunterstown, later to achieve national reputation as a trainer and handler of hunting dogs, was runner-up to Crothers with a final score of 198 out of 200, Crothers' winning score being one better.

"Other local shooters who participated included 'Pete'

Gentzler, Moses Bair, George Miller, Ward Stallsmith, Howard Mitinger, Clarence Cromer and Glenn Myers. Not many will remember however, that it was largely due to Plank's efforts that this town was able to secure the necessary votes required to land this event, and it was always a source of genuine regret that Ed did not live to meet his legion of sportsman friends here in June of that year.

"It is unfortunate that interest in trapshooting locally has waned in later years, for the local club was successful financially and owns, in fee, the fine acreage on Wadsworth avenue, now overgrown with weeds, and had erected thereon a substantial clubhouse which was completely equipped and furnished. While several offers have been made for the property, and one is now pending, so far it has been found impossible to bring the surviving members into agreement as to a fair price, and unless some definite action is taken, it is feared that the property will be sold for taxes."

One of the recent new books of interest to historians and especially to military historians is "American Soldiers in Siberia" by Colonel Sylvian G. Kindall, who has frequently visited friends in Gettysburg and who is also a student of the Battle of Gettysburg.

"American Soldiers in Siberia" is the story of the "Forgotten Army" which was sent to Siberia from the Philippines in 1919. Colonel Kindall, who served on Colonel E. G. Arnold's staff in Africa during the recent war, was a lieutenant with the Americans in Siberia. His personal experience story was started while in the cold wastes north of Russia and completed after the forces returned to the States. His manuscript has been withheld by army authorities until just recently.

The story reveals what the American troops were doing and seeing, day by day, on that strange adventure. It tells of the intrigue and treachery and hardships that confronted the Americans on a mission that was never revealed to the men and which apparently was not made very clear by Washington.

American patrols had various encounters with opposing forces. Some were verbal, others mere brushes. During one sneak attack on a village by Japanese Colonel Kindall was wounded by a Jap bullet and thus became the first American to receive the Purple Heart for service against the Japanese.

The author declares that the Yanks learned to "like and respect the Russians. . . and to despise and distrust the buck-toothed, stump-legged, slant-eyed, idiotic-grinning, wind-sucking Jap soldiers."

Richard R. Smith, New York, is the publisher of the book.

SAFETY DEVICE—Peter Baker is "chained" to his machine at SKF factory in Philadelphia. When the press descends, cords attached to wristbands pull hands out of harm's way if the operator fails to act quickly.

RED SOX BEAT YANKEES 5-4 BEFORE 64,183

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer
Manager Joe Cronin and his Boston Red Sox appeared at last today to have cast off the New York Yankee yoke that has thwarted them of a pennant at least four times in the last decade.

After blowing every pennant-holding series with the Yankees since 1937, the revengeful Red Sox handed the Bronxites a wallop yesterday when they whipped the McCarthyism, 5-4, before a weekday record crowd of 64,183 at the Yankee Stadium.

The victory not only stretched Boston's winning streak to 15 games—four short of the American League standard—but extended the American League leaders' margin over the Yanks to five and a half games.

The Red Sox are not yet entirely free of the Yankee jinx by any means as the New York nine still has two more cracks at the Sox strings over the week-end, but the Hubmen have proved that they no longer roll over and play dead when they come face to face with the Bronx bombers.

Ironically enough Cronin yesterday entrusted curve-baller Joe Dobson, the same hurler whose 1942 defeat by the Yanks prevented Boston from winning 15 straight games, to keep the Red Sox victory skin alive. He was opposed by veteran Red Ruffing, who nipped their string in '37.

This time the tables were reversed although neither hurler was around at the finish. Ruffing was tagged for three runs in the second inning on four successive singles after two were out, the most damaging of which was George Metkovich's two-run double.

A home run by Joe DiMaggio put the bases loaded in the fifth frame put the Yankees ahead 4-3, and sent Dobson to the showers, but the Sox bounced back in the seventh with two runs to win when Rudy York drove in Bobby Doerr with a triple to left-center and tallied on a single by Dom DiMaggio. Earl Johnson, who relieved Dobson in the fifth and pitched one-hit ball the rest of the way, was the winning pitcher. Joe Page, Ruffing's successor, was the loser.

A's, Nats In Tie
In the majors' only other games, Brooklyn shaded the Boston Braves 4-2, in an ace-light contest to move up within a half game of the National League leading St. Louis Cardinals, and the Philadelphia Athletics and Washington saged a 15-inning 5-5 tie in another dark fray. All other teams were either rained out or were not scheduled.

It took the A's and Nats four hours to windup with the draw, the game ending by Pennsylvania's curfew law. The Senators tied the game in the ninth and went ahead in the 13th only to have the A's knot it up again and force it into 15 innings, the longest game of the season.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Lexington, Ky., May 11 (AP)—In a friendly spirit, Baseball Commissioner Happy Chandler sounded off about the weakness of college baseball in speaking to the college sports publicists here the other day. And in an equally friendly spirit, the public relations men slapped him down. . . . The drumbeaters, showing unusually lively interest in the "dead" game, pointed out that so many kids had turned out for baseball squads this spring that in many schools, Michigan State, Western Michigan and Virginia to name just a few, it had been necessary to organize "B" teams. . . .

NO HOME RUNS
Sid Workman, inmate announcer for the West Virginia prison Red Sox, who play all their games at "home" in a sandlot league, watched the Red Sox go into the 12th inning of a recent game against a strong rival. . . . Seeing all the fans sitting tight, Sid remarked: "Right now I wouldn't go home if the warden gave me a pardon."

CIRCLING THE CIRCUITS
It wasn't enough for Jack Baer, Oklahoma U. baseball coach, to have the task of running the Sooners' invitational high school tourney with some 85 teams entered and to watch major league scouts form a regular picket line around the home of Dale Mitchell, his star centerfielder, who has two years of eligibility. Some practical joker had to tell him the Pasquel brothers were in Norman trying to sign Mitchell.

CLEANING THE CUFF
Southern colleges are a trifle annoyed at "ivy league" schools because of the statement that they can't travel south of Philadelphia for football games, though they can travel all the way from Philly to Hanover, N. H. . . . Tulane expects to have the nation's top tennis team in 1947 when Leslie Longshore, current captain, will be aided by the present boy's champ, Dick Moledous, Wade Herren and possibly Jack Tuero. . . . Robert B. Jewell, former Kentucky state fair manager, plans to revive the Old Glory horse sale, but in the midst instead of New York.

ASSAULT SEEKS PREAKNESS WIN

Baltimore, May 11 (AP)—It was Assault against the field at Pimlico in the Preakness today, and the betting was just about even that Assault would follow his victory of a week ago in the Kentucky Derby.

There were ten other three-year olds going to the post with the Texas Terror at 4:55 p. m. (EST) to run for the Black-eyed Susans over the old hilltop track paved with more gold than any strip ever before has been covered for one horse-race—$140,620, with more than $100,000 to the winner.

That is, there were ten others provided promised showers didn't bring mud and cause a couple of outsiders to scratch. And of the entire 11, Assault was the high-powered choice to take the same double trick his daddy, Bold Venture, did, just ten years ago—win both the Derby and Preakness.

About the only argument at all for the big end of the pot, made it Assault against Eddie Arcaro. This doesn't mean Jockey Arcaro will be packing 126 pounds and running a mile and three sixteenths in this 56th renewal of the Preakness, before some 40,000 fans. But Heady Eddie this time is riding Hampden, the horse who wound up third in the Derby, and while Assault defeated the Delaware Dandy in the only two times they've tangled this spring, no one denies Hampden will benefit from the jockey switch. Last week, Hampden was piloted by Job Dean Jessop.

Today's total pot of gold for the first four horses home tops the previous high for a single race—the $136,220 piped up in the Santa Anita handicap last winter. And if Assault gets to the cashier's window quickest, he'll pick up $100,120.

FLASHES OF LIFE—nael FOR BACKSEAT DRIVERS
Salt Lake City, (AP)—Traffic policeman J. H. Simonsen saw an automobile veer from one side of the street to the other before screaming to a halt a foot from a parked car. "What's the trouble?" Simonsen asked as he approached. "I don't know, but here it is," replied the driver as she handed him the steering wheel.

BIGLER HALTS LITTLESTOWN

Biglerville kept alive its hopes for the championship of the county scholastic baseball league by beating the hitherto undefeated Littlestown aggregation 14-1 in a game played Friday afternoon at Biglerville.

An 11-run assault in the fifth inning featured the win for the Cannons, Walters, Biglerville hurling ace, permitted but two safeties while his teammates poled 14, Bucher leading with a pair of singles and a double.

On Tuesday Biglerville will be host to Fairfield in a game postponed from April 26.

ARENDTSTVILLE IS 4-3 VICTOR

Arendtville high gave East Berlin's championship hopes in the county scholastic baseball league a rude jolt Friday afternoon by scoring a 4-3 victory in a game played at Arendtville.

The Apple Pickers led 3-2 going into the last inning but in the top half of the seventh East Berlin knotted the score on Himes' triple and an error after two were out. Arendtville won the tilt in the last half of the same inning. Kane reached second base on an infield error and moved to third on J. Allison's hard infield blow to the pitcher which was good for an infield single. A moment later Kane scored on pinch-hitter Oyler's fly to East.

Sen. Taylor Denies Charge By Shroyer

Harrisburg, May 11 (AP)—State Sen. H. Harvey Taylor (R-Dauphin) denied today as "utterly false" a charge that he attempted to have Former Highways Secretary John U. Shroyer increase the amount of damages to a property owner in a road project near Harrisburg.

Shroyer, candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, said in a campaign speech earlier in the week that Taylor sought to have him boost the amount of damages from $3,800 to $12,000, but that he refused while he was still highways secretary. Taylor, Republican state chairman, said he did for the property owner "what it was my duty as a representative of the people of Dauphin county to do and what I would do for any constituent."

"I had no interest in the matter beyond a fair and prompt adjustment and Shroyer knows it," said Taylor.

Conductor Killed In Train Wreck

Mt. Union, Pa., May 11 (AP)—Two locomotives ploughed into the rear of a freight a half mile east of here early Friday, killing a conductor and tying up traffic on four Pennsylvania railroad tracks.

A railroad spokesman said name of the victim was not determined immediately. The crash occurred at 3:30 a. m., Eastern Standard time after the 110-car freight halted on an eastbound track just outside this Huntingdon county community.

Two engines traveling east on the same track smashed into the standing freight, derailing the locomotives, and the caboose and five rear cars of the train.

Several passenger trains were derailed over the Bald Eagle branch between Tyrone and Harrisburg and wrecking crews started clearing the right of way.

called to the armed forces each year, the number of home service cases increased year by year from 1943. In that year the total was 1,242 cases, by 1944 the number had increased to 2,135 and in 1945 the total was 2,585.

There was almost a month by month increase of cases. Starting with 53 in January, 1943, the activity had jumped to 136 cases, the largest up to date, by December, 1943. In 1944 the number of cases started with 160 in January jumped to 173 in February, was up to 192 in March and remained between 165 and 190 for the rest of the year.

In 1945 the number of cases brought about an increase in the amounts laid out all along the line. In 1943 the amount of grants and loans was $1,066.32. By 1944, the amount had increased to $4,433.51 and then dropped back to $3,702.50 in 1945. So far this year $1,375.41 has been given to veterans or service men's families in the forms of grants and loans.

The largest number of cases involving men in actual service, 1,862, occurred in 1945. During 1944 the total veterans' cases was 208. By 1945, with more men out of service, the number of veteran cases was 552. This year, so far, 403 veterans' cases have been handled, and 288 cases for men in active service have been taken care of.

In nearly all parts of the home service costs increased during 1945. For food and fuel $203.07 was expended in emergency grants, mostly to veteran or service men's families. $729.75 was spent for telegrams and $353.65 for phone calls. Medical and surgical supplies totaled $100.10. Nearly $1,800 has been sent so far this year for home service, according to the report, while more than $5,200 was spent in 1945.

BOOKS THAT HAVE LIVED

I recently attended a gathering of book lovers whose committee had selected the one hundred American books that had been of the greatest influence upon the people. There were a notable lot, and were shown in cases in their first editions, gathered from many sources.

Sixty-one of these books were familiar to me, and many of them, books that have brought great joy to me over the years. No one, of course, would select the same ones, but nearly every well read person would have selected many that were in the list.

I paused before the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, the Federalist presented by Hamilton to George Washington and autographed by him, Walden, which Thoreau had inscribed to his mother, Irving's Sketch Book, which I read and re-read in my youth, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, the Emancipation Proclamation, Melville's Moby Dick, New England Primer, Bellamy's Looking Backward, Bay Psalm Book—and the entire list comprising books that have lived—and which will always live!

Here were books published in America as long ago as 1644. Beautifully printed books—that had been handled, read and re-read, and most of them since reprinted, again and again. There was the tiny Montgomery Ward mail order catalog, first printed in 1872, that you could easily put into your inside coat pocket, without anyone knowing about it! The millions of others now so familiar to people in every quarter of the world, certainly have had their influence on the lives of as many millions, even though a commercial book.

Strange that many of these great books along intellectual lines, were so greatly neglected when first published. The books of Poe, Melville, Stephen Crane, and Thoreau, for example, but which have since become classics.

Anything that is written that is worth while, and which enters into the hearts of people, lives on. It may take a little time, but great writing and thinking never dies. Who can estimate the influence, for instance, of the McGuffey Readers?

Should all the great books of the world be suddenly destroyed, still would they live on in the hearts and minds of those influenced by them. Great books are immortal!

Like children your tires are helped by occasional switching.

A motor tune-up always seems like such a luxury itself it is perhaps natural enough that so many motorists fail to insist upon a few little checks before the work is started. For instance, the service man loses should check for line losses. What good is renewing the breaker points or cleaning up the spark plugs if current is lost in the trip from battery, through the switch and along the wiring?

It is also important to make sure that the battery is up to snuff before proceeding with the electrical part of the tune-up. Give it a quick charge, if weak, while checking the valve tappets, valve spring tension and carburetor float level.

Retainers are Tricky
Time and again owners write me dolefully concerning their troubles with rear main bearing oil seals or packing that do not seem to check oil loss as anticipated. Looking into these I find that in most cases the retainers have not been properly installed. There is some variation here, but invariably the job has to be done in accordance with the manufacturer's specifications for the particular make and model of car. In one job, for instance, the packing is in the form of a roll which is inserted in a groove just behind the bearing. Installation looks simple, yet it calls for following a definite pattern. First the wick should be set into the groove lightly with one's fingers. The final step is to roll it from the ends toward the center, using a light round rod for this purpose.

With all the publicity given to oil additives it is no wonder the average motorist is a bit mystified by the different brands on the market and justified in believing there may be a bit of hocus-pokus involved. Just to clear up the situation, and to put in my vote in favor of these special oils, let me state that they are roughly divided into three types, each with a special effect. The first merely gives oil more oiliness. The second checks the corrosive effect of oil which has been subjected to crankcase contaminants. The third is a detergent agent—something to cleanse the engine of sludge, gums and varnish. A feature of the last mentioned oil is its ability to maintain such substances in suspension so that it won't redeposit within the engine.

Mechanic Joe Speaking:
"When you come to check into the possible reasons for the great amount of carbon that has collected within the cylinders of your car be sure to consider the simple fact that use of the wrong grade of oil is certain to cause trouble. And don't jump to the conclusion that you are making a mistake using lighter oils. These may work up past the rings more freely than heavier oil but being lighter they burn off clean, leaving little residue. Heavy oil that gets by the rings will leave more carbon ash.

"A bad thing about oil that is too heavy for the engine is its habit of causing the pistons to run too hot. Then the oil breaks down rather suddenly, burning off very fast. A rich gas mixture, or trouble with the choke or carburetor, will add to the carbon collection but the real factor is incorrect grade of oil."

Strange as it may seem most of the "jumpy" clutches are in cars operated by drivers who are anything but erratic in their manipulation of the controls. This is explained by the fact that in their effort to obtain smooth clutch engagement they ease the clutch in so carefully that any tendency for the clutch to grab or chatter is aggravated. What the clutch needs is a little more forthright action. The driver should be more deliberate. Thoughtless operators often have less clutch trouble because they never give the process any conscious attention. They just let in the clutch, give her the gas and let it go at that. Actually, this is the best handling for any car that is a bit overpowered, because it helps cut down tendency toward chatter of the drive line.

Useful to Know

In some cases electric car clocks stop at night because their gears are merely shy of lubricant. During the day the gears are jounced into action by movement of the car.

Thin bushings are removed best with the aid of a bushing puller. However, if none is available, cut the old bushing with a hacksaw blade. If a blade can't be used, try a triangular file.

One line in a recent letter has started me thinking. In speaking of difficulty keeping the engine going during the warm-up process this reader mentioned that he was careful "to push the choke button in and out." It has started me wondering if there are many drivers who think that choking is a process of actuating the choke button.

With the engine operating any such handling of a manual choke control would simply result in alternating between overchoking and underchoking. Few engines would stand for it. Choking should be a gradual opening of the choke valve from the full closing for starting to the full opening when the engine's mixture from the carburetor is normal enough to stand on its own feet. Usually half choke is sufficient for the first few minutes of warming up, with best results had with emphasis on as little choke as possible.

Meet A New Oil

The new silicone oil, used in a brand new type of torsional vibration damper for engines, has the property of maintaining its same viscosity over a surprisingly large range of temperatures. For that reason it would be ideal for use in shock absorbers. Eventually it will be offered for this purpose, but its cost at present prohibits such application. In the new damper, by the way, a small flywheel floats within the silicone oil, the whole being encased in a shell which revolves with the engine crankshaft to which it is attached. Whenever engine speeds are abruptly changed the inside flywheel keeps rotating at a more constant speed. This damps out vibrations effectively. In the usual damper the action is largely detuning which is not considered to be as effective.

rules few tourists think to stop to let the engine cool when it shows indications of going into a motor fever. It is surprising how far an overheating engine can propel its car without serious consequences if the operator will provide numerous rest periods for cooling instead of insisting on trying to force the worried cooling system into continuous action. Stop before heading up a hill. If you have climbed a hill, go on down the other side as this will be an effective aid in cooling the motor.

A. Why not consider an air leak around the intake manifold? Perhaps the manifold is cracked on its under side. Take a look. The generator isn't involved in this.

Q. The fuel pump of my car seems to go dead every time I am driving on a warm day. Don't believe the engine is overheating because the gauge reads between 170 and 180. Replaced the fuel pump but the situation is just the same.

A. This is vapor lock. The fuel becomes over-vaporized, blocking its own flow. Try to reduce the engine's operating temperature. Use a different brand of gas for a trial.

HOUSING SHORTAGE

Albuquerque, N. M., (AP)—If the lumber shortage is driving you nuts, consider the poor squirrels.

Mill operator Al Newlander says timber is being cut, loaded and hauled from the woods so fast that the other day a squirrel showed up in his yard on a truckload of lumber—none the wiser for his trip.

SAYS HOSPITAL CONDITIONS DUE TO U.S. POLICIES

Harrisburg, May 11 (AP)—Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, state secretary of welfare, blames strict federal controls for conditions in Pennsylvania's mental hospitals which has resulted in published criticisms.

She stated her report concerned articles in the newspaper PM on the operation of the Philadelphia State hospital, at Byberry, but extended her comments to the situation in mental hospitals generally. Byberry, Miss O'Hara informed the Governor, lost 44.1 per cent of its physicians, 60 per cent of its graduate nurses, and 61.9 per cent of its attendants, due to "wartime policies of the federal government."

"State Has Been Alert"

From October, 1938, when the State took over the hospital, until WPA control of construction and essential materials became effective, the State spent $3,786,676 on new buildings at the institution, she stated, and since then has spent another $2,968,067. However, the war blocked another $1,789,000 worth of projected construction, and a permit was refused for $1,695,000 of additional work, Miss O'Hara went on. "This record must convince any fair-minded man that Pennsylvania has been alert to the needs of this hospital and her patients, and has moved as fast as war has permitted to correct conditions that are not characteristic of mental hospitals that were State-owned and operated in Pennsylvania prior to 1938," she commented.

Cites Pay Schedule

"Personnel is not recruited from among vagrants from courts and police stations. This is a pure piece of imagination. We do have several employees under the supervision of our State parole board. They are making an excellent record." As to adequacy of employees' pay, Miss O'Hara reported the annual scale for attendants ranges from $1,440 to $2,250; for nurses, from $1,764 to $2,184, plus maintenance for all; and for physicians from $3,168 to $4,740, with retirement benefits for all workers. As to the conditions under which some inmates live, she reported specifically: "Each patient has a bed, and bed clothing."

REMINISCENCES

of 70 Years in Gettysburg

By DR. HENRY STEWART
Some of the Older Merchants

The "Merchant Princes" of Gettysburg were the Fahnestock brothers. Their father had come from the eastern border of the county early in the century. They were early residents of Abbotstown, and the only grave-yard in which I have seen the name is Mummet's Meeting House, near East Berlin) and founded the business. There were originally three brothers who succeeded him. James had removed to Philadelphia long before my personal knowledge. Henry and Edward were the two I knew. The latter had been a physician, for a brief time (I have no exact data on him), but had sought wider fields for his operations. He had been Lt. Col. of the 16th Pa. Inf., a drafted regiment of the Civil War, raised almost entirely in Adams county.

Their place of business was the northwest corner of Baltimore and West Middle streets where they ran a dry-goods store in front and a hardware store in the rear. The store room is essentially unchanged, though the building was much changed in the process of creating the "McPherson Block." The Colonel resided in the same building, his brother on the opposite corner. The Colonel had his finger in pretty nearly every pie that was cooking in those days, political and civic.

When they went into bankruptcy in the early 80's, many thought "the world was coming to an end"—though I do not remember that innocent persons were carried down, as they were in some of Gettysburg's later spectacular "bust ups."

Dry Goods Stores

They both went west (literally) and their stamping ground knew them no more until the Colonel was brought back for interment in the Evergreen cemetery.

J. Lawrence Shick conducted for many years what I think was then the largest dry-goods store—until overshadowed by G. W. Weaver and Son. He was succeeded by Dougherty and Hartley—whose names are continued by the present firm on their location, the west corner of Baltimore street and the square.

George Spangler was in the same business on the opposite corner—with a branch (carpet rooms) in his residence on Chambersburg street, the place later occupied by John Spangler, as a restaurant.

Political Parades

Political campaigns of those days were very different from those of today. The necessity was to gather within sound of the unaided human voice as many people as possible—as the only effective way of reaching them, locally, only a weekly press being very insufficient.

One of the most effective means was the torch-light parade. The committee issued to any one who would carry them (and the small boy was in his element) kerosene wick torches, and usually an oil cloth cape which gave a certain uniformity. They paraded all over town, assembling at the end usually in the Center square, for the oratory, which usually was an "ear-full." The "mud slinging" of today is Sunday school talk, compared with that of the years gone by. When a campaign orator concluded, there was no destination short of the penitentiary for every man of the opposing party—if you agreed with his views.

The conclusion of the campaign was celebrated with a parade of another type, the successful party (here, usually the Democratic) taking their opponents "up Salt River." It was a variety of mummer's parade, in which the principal float was the representation of a steam boat making its way up the mythical salt river. (As I recollect, it was actually named after a river in Arkansas). This boat carried effigies of the defeated candidates. All along the route, you could tell at a glance the politics of the residents. The houses of the successful party were illuminated with candles in the windows, from garret to cellar—while the homes of the other fellow remained as dark as a 1941 black-out.

Another feature was a float carrying a black draped coffin, and a bell tolling for the departed political party, which did not always stay departed. I think this feature did not die until the 1890's.

Dubois Will Need Two-Faced Clocks

DuBois, Pa., May 11 (AP)—DuBois clocks would have to be two-faced to keep up with the times.

Dubois is the only Pennsylvania town of more than 10,000 population which hasn't changed to daylight savings time.

Officials said about half the city's 12,000 population will be affected by the business men's action.

Errors With Bordeaux Mixture

Far too many vegetable gardeners approach the problems of insect control and plant disease prevention with the old "patent medicine" idea in mind—cure-alls. Because one kind of insecticide controls a certain pest, they assume that it is effective and suitable for controlling all other insects. When a remedy proves successful in preventing a certain plant disease they jump to the conclusion it is equally as potent in curbing all other plant diseases. This short-sighted course leads inevitably to garden failures or serious losses.

Bordeaux mixture is a good example of this "patent medicine" error. Bordeaux mixture is an excellent fungicide, meaning that it prevents certain fungous diseases when the foliage of susceptible plants is kept coated with the spray at the time the fungi are present. To illustrate, Bordeaux mixture applied every week to 12 days prevents potato blights and minor fungous diseases of the potato plant. But this important fact does not indicate that the same material will prevent other forms of blight on other kinds of vegetables or that it will "kill insects or curb virus and bacterial diseases."

It is well, therefore, to understand the practical limitations of this fungicide. In addition to its profitable roles on potatoes, Bordeaux mixture may be used effectively to prevent black rot and mildew of grapes, early blight and leaf spot of tomatoes, leaf spot of beets, early stages of anthracnose of cucumbers and other cucurbits, early and late blights of celery, foot rot of rhubarb, fungous leaf spot of strawberries, rust of roses and several other minor ornamental troubles.

Of course, when Bordeaux mixture is being applied on any of these plants to prevent a fungous disease and insects are present at the same time, a suitable insecticide may be added. For example, if the Colorado beetle appears on potatoes, lead arsenate may be added to one or more of the regular Bordeaux applications to kill the beetles. Or if aphids are infesting grape vines at a time Bordeaux mixture is applied to prevent black rot, nicotine sulphate may be added to kill the lice. But in every instance the insecticide must be chosen in the light of two important facts—(1) Choose the insecticide known to be most effective against the particular insect; (2) Choose an insecticide that is known by test to be safe on the particular plant.

To use Bordeaux mixture intelligently it is necessary to know why it is effective. This is not a difficult matter to comprehend. Fungi (the singular is fungus) are tiny spores which are usually carried in the air and light on a plant leaf. The little organism penetrates into the leaf tissue between the two coverings and there starts to multiply by extending its thread-like roots out in every direction through the leaf tissue canals. As it spreads and enlarges the growth robs the leaf of sustenance and clogs the sap canals. Of course, Bordeaux mixture cannot destroy the fungi after they enter the leaf. The idea is to keep the leaf surface so uniformly coated with the spray residue that the fungi are destroyed after they light on the leaf and before they have time to enter. These simple facts indicate why the word "prevention" is employed in recommending Bordeaux mixture applications.

Squashes—Summer and Winter—Home gardeners should grow summer varieties of squashes for immediate table use and, if space permits, some of the hard-rinded varieties for winter storage, either for home consumption or market. The first group may be planted at once while the late sorts require early June planting to permit full maturity on the vine before fall frosts arrive.

Summer squashes include Bush Scallop, Summer Crooknecks and the so-called Italian Vegetable Marrow, perhaps better known as cocozelle. The Bush Scallop is occasionally called Cymling. All summer varieties must be harvested before their seeds ripen and while their skins are easily dented with the thumb nail. To allow these to mature on the vine and then attempt to cook them is to gain an unfavorable reputation for the tasty summer squashes. Of course, they should not be peeled before cooking.

The winter group includes such favorites as the Hubbard, Delicious, Boston Marrow and other hard-rinded sorts which mature late and permit all-winter storage. There are two general types of the Hubbard—the well known warty and the smooth type. The Delicious matures in about 75 days from date of planting, the Table Queen (called Acorn) in 80 to 85 days, and the large Hubbards in 110 to 115 days. The Delicious is an excellent squash for winter storage for home use and the same is true of the Table Queen (Acorn). The latter is at its appetizing best when cut in half and the centers filled with honey, seasoning and butter and baked on the half shell. Like other yellow meated varieties of winter squash, Table Queen is a valuable source of the important vitamin A.

Bush summer squashes may be grown in rows 4 to 5 feet wide with plants spaced 18 inches apart in the row. Winter sorts require more room—8 to 12 feet apart each way when grown in hills.

Demanding plenty of moisture-holding organic matter and a deep, well drained loam, squashes should be furnished well rotted manure, turned under deeply and worked through the soil beneath the row or hills. Fertilizer is usually beneficial, with the mixture fairly high in phosphorus and not excessively high in nitrogen, something near a 4-12-4 strength.

Squashes, like other members of the cucurbits, are attacked by soil-borne diseases, thus warranting rotation to a new site each year so they do not follow themselves or such relatives as cucumbers, cantaloupes, pumpkins and melons more frequently than once every three or four years.

The striped beetle is the most dangerous insect enemy of the squash, carrying organisms of wilt to the young plants as well as feeding on the leaves while the young grubs gnaw the stem bases and roots. Dusting with the well known calcium arsenate and gypsum mixture is recommended. Or a cryolite dust or spray or nicotine dust may be employed.

Vine borers may be cut out from the fleshy basal stems if detected soon after they enter. Growing a few hills of extra early Hubbards nearby to serve as "trap" plants and then pulling them and burning them when freely infested is recommended. Many commercial growers prefer a nicotine spray to protect

Students Guests At Presbyterian Church

The Gettysburg Presbyterian church was host to the Presbyterian students of Gettysburg college and the college-age young people of the church at a turkey dinner Friday evening at the church. Representatives of the various official boards of the church also were in attendance. Members of Circle 3 of the Women's Service Guild, with Mrs. Walter Johns and Mrs. Clarence Brister, co-chairmen, served the dinner. Miss Ruth McIlhenny directed the group of young girls in charge of table service.

The evening was spent in getting acquainted and in a program of Christian fellowship. The Rev. Robert M. Hunt, pastor of the church, who has just ended his terminal leave after serving as a chaplain in the United States Navy for 15 months, addressed the group. He invited the students to make that church their "church home" during their college career. He also presented the challenge of Christian service to the church.

The committee in charge of the evening's entertainment included the Misses Edith Carbaugh, Dorothy Moss, Dorothea Elmann, Ruth McIlhenny, Mrs. Harold J. Pegg, Martin Cernek, and the Rev. Mr. Hunt. Serving on the reception committee were the Misses Edith Carbaugh, Dorothy Moss, Ethel Geisley, Messrs. Martin Cernek and Clayton Warman, and Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Thomas, Jr. Approximately sixty persons were served at the dinner.

Bar voice trailed off uncertainly. Bareheaded, her red-gold curls tumbling about her face and shoulders, slender and straight as an arrow, she was a picture all color and fire as her gold sports coat seemed to reflect and hold the rays of the setting sun with a special glow of its own. But Paul, with the clairvoyant sense of a man in love detected a difference in Whitney that was beginning to worry him. Something essentially youthful about her had gone, leaving in its place a new aloofness.

The girl he had left behind him had grown up!

"Well," he probed gently. "Go on. Anyone I do know?"

"Gregory Barberini!"

"Cripes, that phoney! I'm glad he was one of a crowd."

His causal scorn stung Whitney far more than anything he could have said.

"It may interest you to know that I have seen a good deal of the Count lately." Her voice was dignified but now definitely tinged with resentment. "He's wonderful with horses. I like him."

"I don't," Paul answered abruptly. "He's no good."

"I'll decide that for myself, Paul. I've seen a good deal of him the last two months and I'm not going to let you say these things about him. He has an important place in his embassy here."

"All right, I'll skip it. But I can't see why you want to waste your time with an old guy like that. He's over 35—maybe he has arthritis and can't stay up late," he added with an amused smile and a hopeful ring in his voice. No use to take the Count seriously. But the next minute he regretted his misplaced attempt at humor.

"You might as well know now, Paul. I—I like him very much. He is one of my house guests for the weekend and the Hunt Breakfast. I'm riding with him tomorrow." The words were coming with a rush now. Whitney had stopped the car at entrance to Oak Meadow drive. But neither of them was aware of anything except what Whitney was saying.

"I told him we were engaged," she hurried on, not looking at the suddenly tensed face of the man beside her. "He's always been a perfect gentleman and only recently said anything about being in love with me."

"Just a little Sir Galahad!" Paul muttered under his breath. "The louse." If Whitney heard him she gave no sign.

"We're just awfully good friends and he understands me."

"I can see that."

Paul opened the door of the roadster and swung his small bag and his thin athletic body out of the car.

"But I'm taking you to the house," Whitney protested eagerly, suddenly relieved that the moment she had dreaded was over.

"No. I want to walk up. Thanks for everything, my sweet. And remember—I came home to marry you and that's exactly what I intend to do. In case I didn't make myself clear before, I'll repeat. The Count Barberini is a cad and a bounder. Period. He can't make love to my girl."

Good night, dear. . . . See you tomorrow. . . . I'm bringing you something important. . . .

A sunset breeze stirred the leaves lying in heavy drifts against the fences on either side of the Scott driveway. The homecoming son of the family walked briskly up the driveway, whistling for his dog. He did not once look back. For a long moment Whitney watched him go and then with a sigh she started the motor.

Backfire by Rufus Heed

Chapter 4

October sunshine was slanting over the hills and farms of the Virginia countryside as Whitney and Paul Scott drove down to Random Polly late the next afternoon. As they neared familiar landmarks Paul put his arm across Whitney's shoulder and said in a voice thick with suppressed emotion:

"Darling, this is heaven! You and home and old Virginia! I've dreamed of this so many thousands of times and now it's all true and real and you are going to marry me right away. What do you say we ask your Uncle John to do the deed tomorrow?"

Carefully Whitney slowed down the roadster, fussed a little with the brake handle which of course, was all right, then turned to the man beside her and smiled.

"Not so fast, Commander. A girl has to take time to get ready. I hadn't any idea you were coming home so soon."

"Never mind the trousseau, little sister. I'll buy you one in New York after we are married."

"Little sister—little sister," Whitney stiffened at the wheel. No one, not even Paul was going to plan anything as important as her wedding for her—or take everything she did so much for granted. She wasn't at all sure when she was going to be married or—Hastily she let the rest of that idea sink into oblivion for the time being as she said quickly:

"No, Paul. I can't be ready as soon as that. There are things I must do first. Anyway, there is no hurry."

"Oh, but there is, my sweet. Jack Armstrong tells me there has been no manpower shortage in Washington during the war and I'm not taking any chances with the prettiest girl in town. . . . Who have you been dating lately, darling?"

The question she had been dreading was out at last. Since the moment Paul had arrived at her apartment in town she had avoided any direct reply to his questions as to what she had been doing during his absence. All the generalities she carefully explained—in great detail. Canteen work—Red Cross—her care of the stables while their manager was away—social friends—etc., etc.

He had been discussed in almost too elaborate detail in order to ward off this moment. Now Whitney drew a deep breath as she felt her heart beating faster.

"Oh, several men I don't think you know. Ray Jones, Chuck Slade."

Her voice trailed off uncertainly. Bareheaded, her red-gold curls tumbling about her face and shoulders, slender and straight as an arrow, she was a picture all color and fire as her gold sports coat seemed to reflect and hold the rays of the setting sun with a special glow of its own. But Paul, with the clairvoyant sense of a man in love detected a difference in Whitney that was beginning to worry him. Need Anti-Dog Bite Law "With Teeth"

Philadelphia, May 11 (AP)—The Pennsylvania Association of Letter Carriers petitioned the Pennsylvania Federation of labor for legislative support to "have enacted into law an anti-dog bite law."

State labor spokesmen told the mailmen's union at the closing session of the PFL's convention here yesterday that there was already such a law in the statute books.

"I know there is," replied a letter-carrier, "but it isn't enforced. What we want is a law with teeth in it."

MONDAY, TUESDAY

Promising an entirely new brand of comedy surprises, Universal's "Little Giant," starring Abbott and Costello, comes Monday to the Majestic theatre. The screen innovation in which Costello and his partner appear in novel dramatic roles, was directed by William A. Seiter and produced by Joe Gershenson.

The picture stars Abbott in a double role—as a factory sales manager, and as his own uncle, a district sales manager for vacuum cleaners.

Costello is seen as a Cucamonga farm boy who went to the city to make good.

WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY

Beginning Wednesday, the curtain goes up at the Majestic theatre on Seymour Nebenzal's dramatic new film, "Whistle Stop," based on the best-seller of the same name by Maritza Wolff.

A small town, a country fair, a shady nightclub are the settings for "Whistle Stop." A girl who is too beautiful and too knowing; a ne'er-do-well with a pocket full of pride; the ruthless and wealthy owner of the local nightclub; and a bartender with a disreputable past are the chief characters in this tale of love and violence.

George Raft stars as Kenny Veech, the town loafer with a chip on his shoulder. He is in love with Mary, played by Ava Gardner. Runner-up in the triangle is Lew Lentz, sophisticated and wealthy owner of the nightclub, the Flamingo.

FRIDAY, SATURDAY

Joel McCrea in one of the tense moments in "The Virginian."

"The Virginian," starring Joel McCrea, Sonny Tufts, Brian Donley, Barbara Britton and Fay Bainter will be the attraction at the Majestic theatre Friday and Saturday.

The action-packed drama is one concerning the young west. Tufts and McCrea are cast as pals but when McCrea finds Tufts among a group of captured cattle rustlers he is forced to abide by the law of the west in a dramatically filmed scene. McCrea, as "The Virginian," gives one of his finest performances while Tufts is equally impressive as the happy-go-lucky Steve.

Schedule Series Of Milk Hearings

Harrisburg, May 11 (AP)—A series of hearings, which could be the basis for deciding whether Pennsylvania should reassert its authority for fixing milk prices, will be held in nine cities within the next month.

The milk control commission announced yesterday the hearings will be held in Erie, May 23; Pottsville, May 27; Scranton, May 29; Harrisburg, June 3; York, June 4; Allentown, June 6; Reading, June 7, and Williamsport, June 9.

Testimony will be heard on virtually every phase of the milk industry—costs, prices, production, utilization, marketing area boundaries.

The commission's jurisdiction over prices to be paid to producers and to be charged to consumers was yielded to federal authorities during World War II.

Pa. AFL Hits Murray For Attack On Lewis

Philadelphia, May 11 (AP)—The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor concluded its 44th annual convention with the adoption of 103 resolutions, including one which said the PFL "severely condemns the president of the CIO for his unwarranted attack on the gallant fight of the United Mineworkers and their President, John L. Lewis."

The resolution, adopted yesterday, said criticism by Philip Murray was in "exceedingly poor taste and grace" and said the CIO president's "record of strikes and defiance of law are too numerous to mention."

Murray, in an address to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers convention in Atlantic City Thursday said Lewis "turned against his government and fought its people."

Another final action by the group was to table a move to endorse U. S. Senator Joseph P. Guffey in his campaign for re-election to the Senate by referring the question to the 15-man executive committee.

President James L. McDevitt, Secretary-Treasurer Earl O. Bohr and 13 vice presidents were re-elected without opposition.
